Read the following passage, then answer the questions below:

Neil McCarthy is a fifteen-year-old from London. Two years ago, he decided to give up eating meat. When Neil told his parents, they weren't pleased.

'Mum thought it would be difficult to find enough food for me to eat and that vegetarian dishes would cost a lot,' says Neil. I even offered to do the cooking, but Dad said it wouldn't give me enough time to do my homework. He was also worried it would be dangerous for a boy of my age not to eat meat. So was Mum, so they took me to the doctor, who convinced them that it would be fine.

'My friends all eat meat, but I don't. After all, what you eat is your own personal decision. If we go to a restaurant, there are rarely any difficulties – even if there are no vegetarian options, I can always have salad or pizza. And if my friends are having a barbecue, they make an effort to get meat-free sausages for me. I know I made the right choice becoming a vegetarian.
